OUR HISTORY,

Our founder, William Robinson, started the nursery in 1860. At that time the nursery grew a very different range of crops, ranging from soft fruit, apples, plums and pears, to onions, leeks and all the usual vegetables of the time. He also kept cows and horses to use on the smallholding. The nursery was as is now a spread of over 22 acres.

The next generation, also called William Robinson, started to improve the size of onions and leeks in particular. This was done as it is still done today by selection. Only the best specimens were allowed to seed. He started to exhibit the results in the local Flower Shows of the time, winning many prizes. Soon other exhibitors wanted to grow the strain and the vegetable business as we know it was born. He called all his large varieties of vegetable by the prefix Mammoth, as we still do today. As with all generations he was a great diary keeper. These notes are still used by the current family as guidelines for the growing of vegetables.

Many of the unusual varieties of tomatoes are the legacy from the early 1900s. In the 1950's and 60's the 3rd generation, William Martin Robinson, though called Martin to differentiate between his fathers, brought the large strains into the forefront of exhibition varieties. He was awarded the Royal Horticultural Societies Victoria Medal of Honour in 1979 and in 1986 made a Fellow of the Institute of Horticulture. He was instrumental in the foundation of the National Vegetable Society and for many years their Chairman and President. In 1972 all the varieties were registered under the EU rules as distinct and could now be sold in Europe. The nursery seed bank holds many varieties of unusual vegetables. During the mid 1900's these were viewed as strange but are now very widely grown, many such as the range of squashes are in common usage. All are still maintained by the same stringent criteria as for the past 160 years. The nursery is now run by the 4th and 5th generation who continue with the tradition of quality vegetables which look as good as they taste. We are pleased and proud to be a true family business on the same site as our forbears all those years ago, and can assure all customers the seeds are grown using natural methods.

The ground where we grow the exhibition vegetables has been prepared using natural products and the same formula for all the 160 years.

CATALOGUE PRICES CORRECT TILL JULY 2022

Welcome to our 2022 season catalogue, we hope you enjoy the contents.

Who could have predicted what would happen in 2021, Covid 19 continued to spread. Gardeners turned to gardens and allotments during lockdown as a way of escape, making grow your own vegetables popular. Some shows happened, some cancelled until 2022; however, excellent results have again been reported.

There have been some fine onions grown from the Mammoth Improved and Mammoth Red varieties as always ensure the onions are well dried prior to storage. Leeks have grown well but they do prefer a cooler climate. We use the same ground and methods as our father and grandfathers did when the 5lb onions were grown in the very early 1900's. For cultivation hints please turn to page 3 of catalogue. Our cultivation hints booklet has proved very popular, it gives hints on all types of vegetable cultivation, whether for exhibition or for the kitchen. Growing in containers which has proved now popular has a section. Although as with all methods of cultivation they are only guidelines, every type of ground will provide its own problems. This year to reduce plastic usage the Mammoth Onion seed is no longer supplied in a phial but is still graded and selected to the highest standard. We hope to have sets of Rose of Roscoff onion in January but this will depend on the successful import from France

Costs remain the same for seeds but the shipping costs have increased. Sadly we cannot send plants to Northern Ireland.

Once again vegetables which are grown during the summer and harvested for storage or left growing through the winter are popular. We have extended the range of kale varieties, these are ideal for cut and come again use in the winter, are full of vitamins and can easily be grown in containers. Chillies are still as popular as ever, they make a wonderful conservatory or window ledge plant and are very easy to grow. We have mild or hot, a variety to suit every taste.

Thankfully our young plants were received by customers in good condition despite the challenging delivery. We are thankful to Royal Mail and our parcel carrier for their splendid work.

When you visit the nursery for the collection of plants in the spring or summer we are always pleased to give advice, to new starters growing vegetables for the first time or more technical advice for the more experienced, we are here to help all we can. For opening times see back of catalogue. For 2022 we hope to hold our Potato Weekend at the nursery on the 5th and 6th of February for details ring the nursery or check out website or facebook page.

During April and May we are open every day for all your vegetable seed and plant needs, we cannot offer play areas or a café just top quality seeds and plants. We have many varieties of tomatoes, chillies, cucumbers, brassica plus of course our famous Onions and Leeks. For the later months we have the plants suitable to overwinter, kales, purple sprouting broccoli, leeks, spring cabbage, garlic and autumn planting onion sets. During these months we close at weekends.

To order on line go to www.mammothonion.co.uk or our Facebook page for up to date info on life at the nursery. www.facebook.com/mammothvegetables

Kind regards and good gardening,

The Robinsons

We hope the following hints will aid the growth of your onions. Our methods have remained unaltered since the early 1900's. For further hints on all vegetable cultivation go to www.mammothonion.co.uk

Mammoth Onions are best sown from late December to late February. A tray 30cms X 30cms will hold approx.100 seeds. Using John Innes sowing compost sow the seeds and cover with the same compost. Germination should take approximately 2 weeks at a temperature of 13deg C. Keep the seeds moist but never over water at this stage. We have found that a higher germination temperature will in many cases damage the seeds, thus giving poor results. After germination and when the seedlings are at the 'crook' stage, transplant the young seedlings into stronger John Innes compost. At this stage individual pots may be used. Lift the seedlings gently as they are very easily damaged. Water only when the seedlings require it. Botrytis at this stage can be devastating so ventilate on all possible occasions but still keep the temperature at 13deg C. Transfer the young plants out of the greenhouse to a cold frame during Mid to Late March. This ensures the plants are well hardened off prior to planting outdoors from Late April. Planting times will vary according to the area and conditions at that time. Onions grown for exhibition will benefit from being covered by cloches at this time. The smaller onions both red and white varieties are grown using a similar method. They can however be sown later.

Choose an open site with good drainage. For exhibition onions, trench 50cm deep. Fork up the bottom of each trench if solid. Into every 3sq metres of the bed work the following:- 4 Forkfuls of pea, bean or tomato haulms. 1 garden barrow of well-rotted farmyard manure. 140gms Bonemeal. 170gms Sulphate of Potash

First scatter the haulms at the bottom of the trench, and then mix the fertiliser into the bed. It is essential that the greater proportion of the manure should be near the top of the bed, some within 10cms of the surface. This will enable the roots to come into contact with the manure during the early stages of growth. This work is best done in the Late Autumn or Early Winter when reasonably dry. The bed can then be left rough over the winter period. In March work the top into a fine tilth adding the following to an area of 3sq metres. 55gms Superphosphates. 28gms Hydrated Lime or Seaweed Meal. (amounts can vary according to soil type and whether the onions are to be grown for exhibition or kitchen, exhibition ground tends to be acidic quicker than general ground, hence the need for Lime or Seaweed Meal. On ground for general vegetables this need only be done every third year on exhibition ground every year.)

There is no need to firm the ground unless it is very light. When conditions allow, and this will depend on several factors, plant out the now hardened off onion plants. The usual time for planting is Mid April to Mid-May. An advantage is gained by the use of cloches both before and after planting. Cloches used prior to planting will warm the ground giving less chance of a check in growth at this time. Care should be taken after planting not to leave covers over for too long. We have found that 3-4 weeks is sufficient.

Onions can be grown on the same ground for many years; our own onion bed is now 140 years old and has grown onions continuously for this time. However a strict health routine must be followed if you require using the same ground again and again. If any onions are suspect always remove not only the plant but also a small amount of soil from where the onion was growing. Hopefully this will remove any unwanted bacteria in the soil. If the onions are required for general kitchen use or it has not been possible to prepare the ground in the autumn we suggest the following. When possible work into the ground one barrowful of farmyard manure to 3sq metres. Prior to planting add a good general fertiliser, we use Vitax Q4. Seaweed Meal can be added at this time. During the growing season never allow the onion bed to become dry, especially during June and July when the onions are growing well.

The planting distance for onions can vary according to the result required. For exhibition we suggest a planting distance of no nearer than 30cm X 30cm, for kitchen use this may be reduced to 20cm X 20cm. Feeding onions on established beds should not be necessary. Feeding on ground, which has been cultivated for a number of years, can do harm. If feeding is required it must be done in the early season. Over feeding can result in onions with thick necks and poor keeping qualities Water on all occasions when onions are dry. Onions will store better if harvested with a little growth left in the plant. For exhibition lift the onions 10-14 days prior to the show to give the bulb time to dry. Cut the root and top off, leaving enough top to tie down for the show bench. Remove any dead or broken skin and leave to dry in a warm dry area. A greenhouse is ideal for this purpose. Exhibitors will after 7 days be able to turn the tops over for good presentation. For tying down we have found that rubber bands work very well. As the neck of the onion shrinks so does the rubber band, this avoids re-tying. For kitchen use the onions once dry can be stored in a cool but frost free shed or garage.

Leeks are propagated in the same way as onions using the same compost and greenhouse temperature. We do not advise sowing before the 3rd week in January; this avoids the risk of running to seed later in the season. Leeks benefit from a second potting in the third leaf stage. We suggest the leeks be planted outside two weeks after the onions. Again an advantage is gained by giving protection after planting.

Trench and manure the same as for onions when growing for exhibition, but use only half the amount of Bone Meal and Sulphate of Potash. For exhibition do not plant in trenches but on the flat no nearer than 30cm X 30cm.

For kitchen use, leeks may be planted from late April to late June. The traditional method of dropping the leek plant into a 12cm hole may be used. If feed is needed, use the same as for onions but leeks may be fed until later in the growing season.

When growing leeks for exhibition the method of blanching is really one of personal preference. The method we have used historically is one now used by most exhibitors. The leek is planted on the flat and allowed to grow for several weeks. When the plant is large enough a land tile or piece of drainpipe is placed over the top of the plant. There should be 3 or 4cms of leaf showing out of the top. Never fill this tile or pipe with peat etc., as the leek will fill this as it grows. A land tile is used for draining land but these are becoming difficult to obtain so the drainpipe is a useful alternative and should be cut to 30cms tall. For extra blanch a larger tile or pipe is placed over the top and the inner one drawn up supported by peat at its base. This forms a telescope action and the inner tile can be continued to be lifted as required.

A QUICK GUIDE TO WHAT AND WHEN IN THE VEG PATCH

JANUARY Sow Mammoth onions. Sow Mammoth leeks from the 3rd week. Sow salad vegetables for growing in heated greenhouse. Give the spring cabbage planted last autumn a high nitrogen feed. Check crops in store.

FEBRUARY Sow smaller varieties of onions and leeks. Sprout 1st early potatoes. Sow early tomatoes, chilli, sweet peppers and aubergine. Give all overwintered onions and garlic a top dressing of general fertilizer.

MARCH Sow Jolant and Lancaster leeks, early lettuce, chilli and sweet peppers, aubergine and brassica. Outdoor tomato varieties can be sown.

APRIL Plant exhibition onions and leeks outdoors. All vegetable plants can now be planted outside once plants become ready. Sow leeks and winter brassica indoors for planting later.

MAY From mid month plant tomatoes outdoors and courgettes if danger of frost has gone. Sow salad crops in succession. Courgettes, marrows, squash and pumpkin planted. Water all crops when necessary. Check for pests and treat as needed. Peas and beans may now be sown direct outdoors.

JUNE Make sure exhibition vegetables are kept watered. Plant 1st winter vegetables. Keep good water supply to all varieties of beans to help with setting.

JULY Lettuce sown outdoors. Sow 1st winter lettuce. Spring cabbage sown. Plant winter vegetables including the overwintering onion sets. 2nd crop potatoes. Harvest small onions. To have good quality dry onions, harvest early. Pull the onions and cut the tops off, approx 10cm above the bulb for small onions and 15cm for the large. Take off the root and any split skins. Dry indoors (dry shed or greenhouse bench). Wait until the outer skin is dry, store in a cool dry airy place. Do not leave onions outside once pulled; this will affect the keeping qualities.

AUGUST Harvest large onions and tender crops prior to frost. Sow winter salad vegetables. Plant overwintering onion sets from end of month. Move late planted potatoes under protection.

SEPTEMBER Garlic, over wintering onions and Spring Cabbage planted. Prepare exhibition onion and leeks ground for following season. Sow winter salad greens in greenhouse.

OCTOBER Tidy vegetable plot of any debris. Clean greenhouse. When composting garden refuse, do not compost any with disease. Tomato and potato tops which have had blight must be disposed of or burnt not composted. Harvest carrots and beetroot and store in a cool area.

NOVEMBER Wash canes and pots to remove insects. Red Spider mite will overwinter in canes. Check stored onions for decay.

DECEMBER Boxing Day the traditional day for sowing Mammoth Onions. Review the year's crops and make notes for new season

Make your own natural garlic sprays.

Use this simple garlic repellent to deter garden pests like aphids and slugs. It can also help eliminate powdery mildew on foliage.

Peel the cloves from a whole head of garlic and put in a food processor or blender with 235 ml of water. Purée the mixture (this takes about a minute in a regular food processor). Alternatively, chop or crush the cloves as finely as you can by hand and mix well with the water.

Add a further 700ml of water to the mix, along with 30ml of any liquid soap. Blend again and then transfer to a clean jar.

Leave the mixture to steep overnight, or for at least 12 hours, so that the garlic can infuse the liquid with its potent sulphur compounds.

Once the mixture has had time to steep, strain it through a muslin cloth or fine mesh strainer to remove the solid garlic pieces (which would otherwise clog the nozzle on your spray bottle).

Pour the garlic-infused liquid into a reusable spray bottle and store in the fridge between uses.

Mist plants in the evening, holding the spray about 15-30cm away from the foliage, and cover both sides of the leaves with an even coating of the garlic pesticide spray. Reapply every few days (and after any rainfall) when your plants are suffering with an infestation, or once a week as a deterrent.

Garlic has a reputation for warding off vampires but it's also effective against smaller blood-sucking creatures such as mosquitoes.

Add two-three crushed fresh garlic cloves to a food grade oil such as sunflower oil, and leave to infuse for 24 hours.

The following day, add 1 teaspoon of fresh lemon juice to the mixture, along with 500 ml water.

Strain the garlic, lemon and oil mixture through some muslin cloth or a fine mesh strainer to remove the pieces of garlic.

Transfer to a spray bottle and apply this natural repellent as needed to keep mosquitoes away.

Growing vegetables in pots or containers.

Many types of vegetables can be grown in pots or containers. It is useful when space is limited to use all space available.

However a few simple rules apply.

Make sure the container is large enough to support the vegetable.

Use a loam based compost such as John Innes No.2, or a mix of compost and John Innes No.2. This will ensure a good root system and the John Innes has more water retention than a fibre based compost.

Feed regularly, all pot grown vegetables need more feed than ones in the open ground. Water well during growth, especially during the hot summer months as container grown vegetables will dry out.

Choose the right type of vegetable to grow. Listed below are some we have found very successful in containers.

Spinach, Chards, Tomatoes, Cucumber, Courgettes (Black Forest is ideal it climbs as well), Squashes (small fruited varieties are best), Kale, Cabbage (the Hispi cabbage works well), Lettuce (the salad leaves work well and can be used all summer from the same container). Beetroot, Carrots, Rocket, American Land Cress, Parsley, Beans, Peas, Spring Onions, Radish, Turnip.

The large vegetables for exhibition are best grown in the open ground outdoors; they need a lot of attention when grown in containers.

Many trailing plants can be grown up a decorative obelisk or frame and look just as attractive as any flowering plant. Kales, Spinach and Chards are frost hardy and so make a useful winter cut and come again vegetable. There are many different varieties of Kale and Chard; to provide a colourful but edible display all winter long.

GENERAL RULES FOR FEEDING VEGETABLES.

All root vegetables. Never. If the ground is correctly prepared.

Brassica Never. If the ground is correctly prepared

Chilli Peppers When the fruit has started to set and swell well, never feed too early.

Courgettes, Marrows and Cucumbers When first picking starts.

Onions and Leeks Never. If the ground is correctly prepared.

Onions and Leeks for exhibition. Never. If the ground is correctly prepared. However they respond to a feed of Nitrate of Soda if a burst of growth is needed.

Peppers and Aubergines When fruit is golf ball size.

Tomatoes under glass. When the fruit on the first truss is pea size.

Tomatoes outdoors. When the fruit on the second truss is pea size.

NEVER FORGET PLANTS DON'T HAVE TEETH, THEY DO NEED WATER TO TAKE UP THE NUTRIENTS IN THE GROUND! ALWAYS WATER THE GROUND WELL IN HOT DRY CONDITIONS.
